ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS

BE IT KNOWN WHEREAS James R. Lowell, T. D. Woolsey, Charles Eliot Norton, William M. Sloane, B. L. Gildersleeve, William W. Goodwin, Henry Drisler, Frederic J. de Peyster, John Williams White, Henry G. Marquand and Martin Brimmer, have associated themselves with the intention of forming a corporation under the name of the

for the purpose of the establishment and maintenance of a school of classical studies at Athens, in Greece, for American students, and have complied with the provisions of the Statutes of this Commonwealth in such case made and provided, as appears from the certificate of the President, Secretary, Treasurer and Executive Committee of said Corporation, duly approved by the Commissioner of Corporations, and recorded in this office:

NOW, THEREFORE, I, HENRY B. PIERCE, Secretary of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, DO HEREBY CERTIFY that said J. R. Lowell, T. D. Woolsey, C. E. Norton, W. M. Sloane, B. L. Gildersleeve, W. W. Goodwin, H. Drisler, F. J. de Peyster, J. W. White, H. G. Marquand and M. Brimmer, their associates and successors are legally organized and established as and are hereby made an existing corporation under the name of the

with the powers, rights and privileges, and subject to the limitations, duties and restrictions which by law appertain thereto.

WITNESS my official signature hereunto subscribed, and the seal of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts hereunto affixed this twenty-third day of March in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six.

REPORT OF THE DIRECTOR¹

To the Managing Committee,

American School of Classical Studies at Athens:

As my tenth year in the direction of the American School nears its close I find myself reflecting upon the activities of the past decade and upon the changes which have occurred. For such changes as may not meet with the approval of the Managing Committee I must accept the blame; for such as bring credit to the institution I must be the first to acknowledge our indebtedness to all those associated with the School—the staff, Greek and American; the members, junior as well as senior; the Managing Committee; the Board of Trustees. To all of these I extend my heartfelt thanks for their support of the School and for the generous assistance and encouragement which they have given to me. Few academic administrators can have enjoyed, during the past decade, such a pleasant and pacific atmosphere in which to work; few, I believe, can have had such wholehearted support from every element of the community. To all those with whom I have had the good fortune to be associated I express my sincere appreciation. My successor, Professor McCredie, has been with us in Athens since early February. To say that I wish him “good luck” would be a vacuous phrase; I am convinced that he possesses sufficient talent and competence to succeed in his new job with or without the intervention of Tyche. To him and to Mrs. McCredie, however, I can wish with all my heart that they may find their new duties as pleasant, their academic activities as satisfying, and their associates as delightful as have my wife and I during our years at the School.

The number of students enrolled in 1968 is no larger than in 1958. We have generally limited our student body—for reasons of maximum effectiveness—to about sixteen first-year members per year; these sixteen may be said to represent the most promising young Hellenists and archaeologists in the United States and Canada. With each passing year it has seemed to me that the average ability of the student group has been higher, the average promise greater. Of the students who attended the School between 1958 and 1962 five are already serving as Directors or Assistant Directors of major excavations in Greece and Turkey; many more hold outstanding faculty posts in our most important universities. I anticipate an even more striking record, numerically, for the students of more recent years. This year's group contains a greater number of experienced graduate students than we have generally had with us. To their enhanced maturity and to the influence which they exert on younger members I attribute the outstanding atmosphere of scholarly enthusiasm and of analytical inquiry which has marked the field trips and seminars of the past fall and winter. The number of students who continue to enter the classical field can assure us of a uniformly well-qualified student body each year. We could, in fact, anticipate at least a modest increase in the enrollment; we can accept up to 20 new students annually without reducing appreciably the effectiveness of our present program. Any increase beyond that number would entail an enlargement of the professorial staff.

It is regrettable that for 1969-70 there will be no student fellowships available for the School through the Fulbright program. The elimination of the grants has been due to arbitrary action on the part of the Department of State, action against which the Board of the United States Educational Foundation in Greece (of which I am a member) has protested; we hope that at least two student grants will be restored to the program for 1970-71 and following years. We are indeed fortunate, however, in the increase of funds available for the School's own fellowship program. The addition, during the last ten years, of the Gennadeion, Stevens, and McFadden Fellowships and the increasing income from fellowship endowment has made it possible for the School to provide needed support to many more students. And we may look forward to further fellowship capital when a grant from the Jacob Hirsch Foundation (announced in 1963) is turned over to the School, upon the termination of certain life interests in the Hirsch Estate.

Since 1958 the regular academic staff has been increased by the welcome addition of a full-time Field Director for the Corinth Excavations; and the Directorship of the Agora Excavation is now filled by a younger scholar, while Professor Thompson has moved to the rank of Professor of Archaeology. Our professorial staff now consists of ten persons; their contributions to the academic work of the School are augmented by the many senior scholars who spend all or a part of each year in Athens. These scholars usually number between five and eight; their presence is due to special research fellowships or grants from organizations such as the American Council of Learned Societies, the Guggenheim Foundation, the Archaeological Institute of America, the American Association of University Women, etc. The American School does not itself provide comparable research grants; but it would be most desirable that one fellowship of the School, with a stipend of eight to ten thousand dollars, be available each year to an outstanding American, Canadian or foreign scholar for study and research here. The presence of such a scholar would have a beneficial effect on the academic program and would also bring added prestige to the School.

The Greek staff of the School has suffered much change since 1958. Through death we have lost our legal adviser of many years Aristides Kyriakides and our Corinth excavation foreman Evangelos Lekkas. Retirements have necessitated a number of new appointments: Mitsos Foliros, assistant in the Gennadeion, Paraskevas Avgoustidis, cook in Loring Hall, Costas Michelakis, night watchman, Eleftheria Papageorgiou, maid in the main building, and several others have reached retirement age since 1959. During the present year Mrs. Sarantides has retired from her post as manager of the student residential hall and dining room. In her place we have employed Mrs. Marie Fidaio, who takes on greater responsibility; as Household Manager she is in charge of the domestic staff and the domestic operation of all the School buildings except the Director's apartment and the house of the Librarian of the Gennadeion. With a new cook and a new manager in Loring Hall we find that the operation of the student residence is smoother and more economical than in the past. Miss Eurydice Demetracopoulou, long the Assistant Librarian of the Gennadeion, will retire as of June 30, 1969. She will be replaced by Mrs. Sophia Papageorgiou, a Greek national who has received library training at the University of Illinois. Miss Demetracopoulou, member of a large family of distinguished scholars, will fortunately not sever her connection with the School entirely, but will be available to assist the staff of the Gennadeion as a consultant. During the past two years we have been able to increase the staff of the main library so that Mrs. Philippides now has two full-time assistants; one of these, Mrs. Eugenia Foster, is a trained librarian. In the business office we have added a new employee who assists Mr. Athanasiadis and Mr. Sakkas and also operates the School's two duplicating machines (one Verifax, one fluid duplicator) and the microfilm camera. This year we have been compelled to increase the number of the housekeeping staff (because of the necessity of observing an 8-hour day); to the two gardeners of 1958 a third was added in 1962. The Director continues to handle the affairs of the School with the assistance of a secretary-typist and of a part-time Secretary (student); but it is hoped that a full-time Administrative Assistant can be appointed in the not too distant future to handle routine office work, supervision of the physical plant, maintenance, and all problems affecting Greek staff and physical equipment. Our Greek professional staff now consists of Mr. George Al. Mylonas, Legal Representative (assisted by his partner, Mr. Konstantinos Kavvadias) and Dr. Elpidiforos Papantoniou, Medical Advisor.

The physical plant has been extensively overhauled during the past decade. Each of the School buildings in Athens has been remodelled. Most recently the main building has been restuccoed and painted on the exterior while the Gennadeion roof (a flat terrace) has been waterproofed and resurfaced. We have just commenced the resurfacing of the stuccoed stone wall which encloses the School property on Souidias, Gennadiou and Helvetias Streets. Continuing maintenance must be contemplated in each year's budget, but I hope that no serious, major repairs will be necessary in the near future except the following: the house at 9 Plutarch Street, when it is eventually occupied by the School, will require extensive remodelling in order that it may become the new Director's residence; the main building of the School still requires weather-stripping of all double-hung windows and new aluminum window screens throughout. The library and seminar room need improved lighting. These essential repairs I must leave to my successor. In other respects the buildings are in good condition; but it must be remembered that most of the School plant is more than 40 years old (the original part of the main building was occupied 81 years ago) and that emergency repairs, especially to the water and heating pipes, are inevitable from time to time.

I am delighted that funds have now been made available for the construction of a new excavation house at Corinth. A more essential project is the building of the new wing of the Gennadius Library and the acquisition of endowment to maintain the Library (staff, utilities, books). This should be considered, it seems to me, the most urgent program facing the School at the present time.

In 1958-59 the School's excavation activities were at the Agora of Athens and at Corinth. The work at Lerna had come to an end in the previous year. The only other American excavations in Greece were those at Samothrace and at Isthmia. Since 1959 the work in the Agora and at Corinth has continued without interruption. New excavations have been undertaken by the School itself at Nemea (two campaigns); and by Contributing Institutions at Kea, Kenchreai and Porto Cheli. Other Contributing Institutions have participated in the excavations at Isthmia and Corinth and in the salvage excavation of 1968 at Pylos in Elis. In the summer of this year yet another American excavation will commence, at the prehistoric site of Nichoria in Messenia. Throughout all this period the activities of Professor Blegen at Pylos and of Professor Mylonas at Eleusis and Mycenae have continued regularly; our School Architect, Mr. John Travlos, has also carried out extensive investigations for the Greek Archaeological Society at Eleusis and for the Greek Service of Antiquities (with the late John Threpsiadis) to the south of the Olympieion in Athens.

Our permits to excavate and—generally speaking—our very existence as a School in Greece depend upon the goodwill of the Greek Service of Antiquities. This goodwill we enjoy now as we have in the past; the present Superintendent General of the Service, Professor Spyridon Marinatos, has shown himself most generous and cordial to the School, particularly in the matter of expropriation of land, at the expense of the Greek State, for the extension of the Agora excavations. To him and to his colleagues, whom we find uniformly eager to assist foreign scholars in their research projects in Greece, we are deeply indebted. This year, in addition to routine permissions for study and photography in the various museum collections, we have received numerous special permits: for Professor Evelyn Harrison to remove several modern frieze-backer blocks of the Athena Nike temple in order to study the cuttings on the top of the architrave; for one of our students to prepare detailed architectural drawings of the temple of Apollo Epikourios at Bassae, including all the fallen blocks, and to make a topographical survey of the area surrounding the temple; for another student to clean and to make a small trial excavation within the Bouleuterion at Olympia (the German Archaeological Institute has also kindly given permission for this project); for myself to have the relief of the Mourning Athena in the Acropolis Museum dismounted in order that the lower edge of the relief may be examined and photographed. The officials of the National Museum have been most generous in permitting members of the School to study in detail and to have photographed various groups of vases in the collections of the Museum.

Our relations with the American Embassy and other American governmental agencies in Greece have also been cordial at all times. Our successive ambassadors have each demonstrated considerable interest in the activities of the School and have supported us in many ways. We are called on from time to time by the Embassy to show distinguished visitors around the Acropolis and around our excavations in Athens and Corinth; this we are glad to do. It seems to me that our present mutually friendly relations with the American Embassy are ideal. We are not dependent on the United States government either at home or abroad and we should thus be able to weather—more effectively than some of the other Foreign Schools of Archaeology, which are agencies of their respective governments—the occasional political storms which may disturb official relations between the Greek government and our own. I am convinced that our present status of political independence (and neutrality) places us in a position of great advantage with our professional Greek colleagues.

SPRING AND SUMMER, 1968

In the spring term, 1968, many of the first-year students participated in the excavation at Corinth; others engaged in independent research. Shigenari Kawashima completed a School Paper: "Oedipus and Daimon—Sophocles' View of Man"; he has since returned to Japan and is now Instructor of Greek and Latin at International Christian University. I regret to say that none of the other students has yet submitted a School Paper, though several did commence, or pursue further, research from which dissertations may be expected to develop. Of two of the students who did not excavate it may be said that they gave little sign of industry during the spring term; but the others were certainly engaged in serious research. Many of our students nowadays are working on their dissertations while in Athens and feel that they cannot interrupt the smooth progress of that major investigation for the preparation of a shorter School Paper; from some of these I may receive, after a lapse of months and in lieu of the Paper, a chapter of the dissertation which, because of its special content or treatment, can stand as an independent and valuable text. Those students especially, who realize regretfully that their present enjoyment of Greece is to be limited to a single academic year, feel that they cannot sacrifice the entire spring term to library research or even to a topographical problem which might take them out into a single restricted province of Greece; they feel the justifiable need to use the spring months for travel to parts of Greece they did not visit on the fall trips; with this feeling we can all sympathize. Sometimes such students send to me, a year or two after leaving Athens, a typescript School Paper or the reprint of an article which grew out of the experiences and knowledge gained during the months in Greece. Greece has so much more to offer the visiting student now than in the early years of the School's history or even than in the years just before and after the last war, that we cannot impose rigid limits on the students' activity in the spring months; we can only note when such activity seems to be meaningful and productive or when it appears to be aimless and void. In recent years the Visiting Professors, Professor Vanderpool and I have prepared an evaluation of each regular student which can be used for guidance in the future when requests for recommendation or credit certification come to the Director's desk.

Our first double Summer Session was held in 1968, under the direction of Professors Donovan and Wiencke. To them and to the Secretaries of the School—William Biers, who made all the preparations, and John Lavezzi, who provided the actual administrative guidance during the sessions—we are indebted for the success and the surprising smoothness of the operation.

During the spring and summer months excavations were carried on under the auspices of the School at Corinth (University of Texas), Isthmia (University of California at Los Angeles), Kenchreai (Universities of Chicago and Indiana), Porto Cheli (Universities of Indiana and Pennsylvania), Kea (University of Cincinnati) and Samothrace (Institute of Fine Arts, New York University). In addition, the School, in collaboration with the University of Colorado and with financial support from the National Foundation for the Humanities, launched a season of salvage excavation at Pylos in Elis (modern Armatova, northeast of Amaliada); Professor John Coleman of the University of Colorado was in charge. Of all these projects reports will appear in future issues of Hesperia. Longer reports on the School's own major excavations at the Agora of Athens and at Corinth appear below.

Many visiting scholars, mostly alumni of the School, spent the summer months in Greece and made use of the School's various facilities: libraries, excavation storerooms, etc. It should be pointed out that most of their research projects require, at one time or another, appeal to the Greek Service of Antiquities for assistance, most often for permission to view objects in storerooms and to make drawings and photographs of them. Often the individual scholars have arranged for such permission directly with the staff of the Museum concerned; sometimes the School has submitted a written request to the Museum or to the central offices of the Service. We have been informed (unofficially) that a new directive of the Service requires that all requests from foreign scholars to make special studies in Museums or to take photographs or drawings, or to publish objects in the Museums must be submitted in writing by the foreign School concerned to the central offices of the Service. This means that there will be much greater delay than in the past in obtaining approval for such requests. I urge all members of the Managing Committee and alumni of the School who propose to do research in Greece this summer or fall to communicate with the Director well in advance of their arrival, in order that the delays occasioned by waiting for written permits may be reduced to a minimum.

FALL AND WINTER, 1968-1969

The list of student and senior members appears elsewhere in the Annual Report. Of the sixteen regular members, ten held fellowships or scholarships; of seven associate members, two held similar grants. The group is remarkable for its scholarly competence, enthusiasm, cohesiveness and good spirit. The four second-year members have much in common with the younger students and accompanied the group on a number of the fall and winter field trips. During the winter term Professors Boegehold and Conant organized a series of Monday afternoon seminars at which students or members of the staff presented twenty- to forty-minute reports on current research. The meetings were well attended by senior members and staff as well as by the students; the discussion following each paper was stimulating and revealing. I hope that this program, instituted two years ago on the initiative of Professor Dow, can be continued in the future.

The fall trips followed our usual pattern; Northwest Greece took the place of Macedonia this year. Weather was not always propitious, but there was no serious impediment to our program. During the winter the weather has been inclement, more rain and more prolonged periods of low temperatures than are normal; the condition is continuing into late March. As a result of the heavy rains, the School's tennis court has not been in usable condition since late October; when the surface of the court is able to dry thoroughly, it will require considerable attention and resurfacing in order to put it into shape for playing.

During the winter months Professors Boegehold and Conant offered seminars on Documents in Athenian History and on Euripides respectively. Most of the students (regular and associate) attended both seminars as well as the course in the Topography and Monuments of Athens and the Friday trips. Many of the students, during the winter vacation, took trips to Egypt and the Near East.

This spring and summer some of the students will be involved in excavation: Hector Williams, the White Fellow, and Thomas Boyd, the Stevens Fellow, will be at Corinth, as will Sara MacVane and John Lavezzi, the Secretary; Stella Grobel, Stephen Miller and John Camp will excavate in the Athenian Agora; W. W. Cummer and Karen Vitelli will join Professor Rodney Young at Gordion; Mary Sturgeon will take part in the first campaign of the excavations at Nichoria in Messenia (University of Minnesota);

Susan Rotroff will be working with the University of Texas at the Gymnasium site in Corinth; Nancy Palmer will be attached to the University of Pennsylvania's underwater investigation off Cyprus. Others will be engaged in private research.

Three students have completed dissertations this spring: Holly Schanz, a study of genealogical groupings in Greek portrait sculpture; Michael Walbank, 5th century proxeny decrees; Robert Padgug, Polybius and the Depopulation of Greece in the Third and Second Centuries B.C. Others are working on their dissertations: Keith DeVries, the Capps Fellow, Archaeology of Boeotia in the 8th and 7th Centuries B.C.; Joel Itzkowitz, the Seymour Fellow, textual problems in Lucian; Jon Mikalson, the Wheeler Fellow, a restudy of the epigraphic sources for the Attic religious calendar; Robert Pounder, the literary tradition concerning the Seven Sages and its relation to Peripatetic philosophy; Stella Grobel, the stylistic characteristics of Macedonian architecture in the Hellenistic Age; John Fisher, the nomenclature of epigraphic monuments; Elsa Peterson, the history of Corinth between 146 and 44 B.C.; Marie Spiro, early Christian mosaic pavements; Judith Rubinstein, the classical tradition in early Christian art. Frederick Cooper will spend the spring and summer months at Bassae, where he proposes to make an actual state plan of the temple and of its fallen blocks. W. W. Cummer, before leaving for Gordion, is completing his investigation of a monumental early Roman tomb at Kenchreai.

Professor Alfred Bellinger spent the fall months at Corinth working with the excavation coins of recent campaigns; in December he lectured to the students on numismatics. Professor Evelyn Harrison has pursued her researches in Greek sculpture, particularly in connection with the frieze of the Athena Nike temple; she also lectured to the students on the sculpture in the Acropolis Museum. Professor Charles Brand, Gennedeion Fellow, is preparing a study of Byzantine government, economy and society under the Comneni. Professor Thomas Jacobsen, Olivia James Fellow of the Archaeological Institute of America, has been studying the results of his two campaigns of excavation in the neolithic cave at Franchthi near Porto Cheli, where he will resume digging this summer; during February he lectured to the students of the School in the prehistoric rooms of the National Museum. Professor Dieter Thimme is engaged in a study of the Carrey drawings of the Parthenon sculptures; he is also preparing the publication of some of the finds from the Kenchreai excavations. Dr. Nancy Bookidis is working toward the publication of the terracotta sculpture from the sanctuary of Demeter at Corinth. We were privileged to have with us, for shorter stays, during the fall and winter, Professor Robert Scranton, Professor and Mrs. Richmond Lattimore, Professor Hazel Tolliver, member of the Managing Committee from Lindenwood College, Professor R. K. Sinclair of the University of Sydney, and others. The presence of all these scholars in the School community has been stimulating to students and staff alike.

The annual Open Meeting of the School was held on February 27, 1969. The Director, in lieu of reporting on the activities of the several American excavations, lectured on "The Archaic Temples at Corinth"; the remarks were designed to summarize the evidence for successive peribolos walls discovered in last August's excavation to the north of the 6th century temple and to discuss the literary evidence which seems to have a bearing on the identification of the cult of the Greek period. Many of the staff have lectured under the auspices of the Fulbright program, of the College Year in Athens, of the Greek Heritage Symposium, etc. The Field Directors of the Agora and Corinth excavations and members of their staff are called upon frequently to explain their sites and their work to visiting groups of scholars and students and to distinguished visitors (the latter category generally introduced by the United States Embassy or Information Service).

As the moment draws near when my family and I shall depart from Athens and the School, we feel that we must express again our gratitude to friends within the School here and in America for their constant support and encouragement. To you all we extend our greetings and best wishes. We can assure you of our unfailing interest in the School and we look forward to continued association with its work both in America and in Greece.

No one can spend ten years in Greece without developing a deep love for the country and a warm affection for its people. To these feelings the archaeologist will add heightened sensitivity to the ancient monuments, which, like loved and familiar music, acquire with every reviewing a greater meaning and more powerful emotional impact. The response to music one may experience, regardless of time or place, if only one have the means of reproduction of the sound. But the passionate response to architecture and sculpture, the awareness of artistic achievements of incomparable beauty and harmony such as those of the Acropolis, of Delphi, of Olympia, cannot be aroused by any reproduction; only the original will do. Herein lies, perhaps, the major source of our great regret at leaving Greece, and herein, too, the immense joy of anticipation of our return.

REPORT OF THE LIBRARIAN OF THE SCHOOL

To the Director,

American School of Classical Studies at Athens:

I have the honor to submit the following report on the School Library for the year of April 1, 1968, to March 31, 1969.

The Library now has passed well over the 30,000 mark: 31,061 volumes in all, with 1,844 processed through the year, a number greater than at any other time in the history of the School; 1,046 volumes have been bound.

The Library has been fuller than at any time before. Every place on the tables in the Main Reading Room has been assigned, occupied through many hours of the day and often late into the night. Some of the places at the tables and carrels have even been assigned in rotation to two or three people. Two members of the Greek Archaeological Service on holiday have used the Library for as long as a month. Our visiting scholars have come from twelve countries, including the Philippines. We have supplied reference, bindings, photostats, microfilms, photographs, inter-library loans, advice, book-for-book exchanges.

The Reading Room now has cream-colored Venetian blinds, new upholstery on the old but comfortable chairs by the fireplace, and new padding on the seats of the upright chairs at the tables. Two modern standing lamps for the armchairs were bought in the United States at Christmastime by Charles Williams. A large suction fan has been given by the Director, for the Reading Room.

The Library office underwent a remodelling last summer as there are now three people in one small room. The old dumbwaiter to the upper floor has been removed, leaving more room for shelves. All walls but one now have steel shelving, and new work units have been provided for the use of those at work on the catalogue.

Two new sections of the catalogue, the essays by single authors and the Festschriften and the collections of essays, have been recatalogued and given temporary numbers preparatory to reclassification. The order of the names of the authors and of the dedicatory volumes was becoming too confused as the sections grew. Temporary numbers are likewise being given to new books in the classical and topographical sections, for the same reasons. With the completion of the classification in each section, the numbers can quickly be changed on cards and books. (One mechanical difficulty of the School Library is that at no time of the year is it empty!). We hope that the main bulk of the catalogue will be out and finally in use in two years' time. It has been a very long task, especially because we have had insufficient staff. The Library is deeply grateful to the Trustees and the Managing Committee for the additional funds of this last year which have made it possible really to begin to make headway on the project. Mrs. Foster, our Assistant Librarian for the last two years, has taken over a great part of the cataloguing and most of the routine duties of the Library administration, and Miss Harikleia Papatantonaki, who has been with us since last July, besides being an excellent typist in Greek and English, has been useful in many other ways, notably in taking inventory of the shelves singlehanded over a period of weeks.

A visible index of the ASCS periodicals has been prepared on the model of that recently instituted by the German Archaeological Institute, by Mrs. Tea Anemoyanni, formerly at the Institute. This will make it possible for us to check immediately what volumes are included in the holdings of the Library, and which series of periodicals have gaps, so that missing volumes can be replaced at first glance from dealers' lists. This will also vastly facilitate regular re-editing of the lists of the holdings of the Library for a possible Union List of the archaeological and classical periodicals of Athens. A general Union List is at present being drawn up in Athens, chiefly for the use of scientists and the medical profession. Our archaeological libraries have been advised not to join this enterprise as we are special libraries and not open to the public, but the existence of a special union list of the archaeological institutions of the city would be of great value to us all, especially in these days of rising prices, when it is unnecessary to be duplicating the rarer periodicals which may already exist in town. The art historians and classicists of Rome have long possessed such lists of holdings, essential for research. (See below, under RECOMMENDATIONS).

We cannot sufficiently express our gratitude to the supporters of the Auxiliary Fund who have given so magnificent a gift to the Library endowment. Mr. Blegen's gift of $500 in memory of Mrs. Blegen as well as Dr. Lebowich's annual gift of $50 have been most deeply appreciated. Miss Richter has sent us her fine new book, Engraved Gems of the Greeks and the Etruscans, and the University of Cincinnati the splendid volume on the frescoes of the Palace of Nestor at Pylos, by Mabel Lang. We are most grateful to our many friends, both people and institutions, who have given us books or their own publications.

The special Funds have enabled us to acquire expensive books such as the 7th and 8th volumes of Schuchhardt's Antike Plastik, Schefold's Die Griechen und ihre Nachbarn, Scavi di Caesarea maritima, De Franciscis' Il Museo Nazionale di Napoli, Quintus Smyrnaeus's Posthomerorum Libri XIV (ed. A. Koechly), E. Bignone's Empedocle and H. Usener's Epicurea, A. S. F. Gow's edition of the Greek Anthology, Bonnell's Beiträge zur Altertumskunde Russlands, Europa: Festschrift für Ernst Grumach, K. von Fritz's Die griechische Geschichtsschreibung, J. Schäfer's Hellenistische Keramik aus Pergamon. With the Fund in memory of Mr. Aristides Kyriakides we have bought many books on ancient law (such as R. Willetts' The Law Code of Gortyn) or on the theater (such as De Bernardi Ferrero's Teatri classici in Asia Minore) and, with the Kent Fund, Stephane Gsell's Inscriptions latines de l'Algérie and the 6th volume of Jalabert's Inscriptions grecques et latines de la Syrie. We have continued the policy of buying second copies of books much in demand: certain volumes of the Inscriptiones Graecae and the Supplementum Epigraphicum Graecum, Brueckner's Der Friedhof am Eridanos, extra sets of the early Papers of the American School of Classical Studies and the supplementary papers of the Journal of Hellenic Studies, Dörpfeld's Das griechische Theater and an extra set of the first fascicle of plates of the Excavations at Assos.

We have bought "runs" of the following periodicals: Archaeological Journal, Bonner Jahrbücher, Sborník prací filosofické fakulty Brněnské University, Bulletino della Commissione archeologica comunale di Roma, Folia archaeologica, Revue belge de philologie et d'histoire, Revue biblique, Revue des études latines, Glasnik zemaljskog muzeja u Sarajevu, complete back issues of the new series of the Proceedings of the Cambridge Philological Society, and all the issues of Πλάτων and the Proceedings of the Prehistoric Society. New to us this year are Anatolica, Annuario bibliografico di archeologia, Antichthon, Ἀρχαιολογικὰ Ἀνάλεκτα ἐξ Ἀθηνῶν, British Archaeological Abstracts, Current Archaeology, Dedalo, Eos, Ἐπετηρὶς τῆς Ἑταιρείας Στερεοελλαδικῶν Μελετῶν, The London Archaeologist, Magna Grecia, Perficit, Raggi, Revue hittite et asianique.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Books. We shall have used this year's budget by the middle of April. To keep the Library at its present standard I feel that we should ask for an increase of $1,500 for next year. If we are to keep on acquiring reprints of books while the editions still last, and the back issues of periodicals, we should be asking for even more.

Personnel. The value of the staff to the School increases with each year that it is with the Library. The stipend of the excellent Assistant Librarian should if possible be increased.

Union List of Serials. Since the same person has already organized the visible indexes of the periodicals of two of the archaeological schools, we think that if it were possible for her to make records in similar visible form for the other archaeological schools of the city, with these records as permanent basis it should be easy to maintain a general list of the classical and archaeological periodicals of Athens, with additions at regular intervals. The cost of the basic part of the entire project (clerical help, visible index folders and cards) to judge from our experience should come to about $1,500. It would be most desirable to have this list based on records by means of which it could be kept up with a minimum of difficulty. If some of the Schools cannot afford this expense perhaps a grant can be found to cover the remainder of the cost.

Our emphasis this year has been on the acquisition of out of print and scarce items (either in their original editions or in reprint editions at much higher prices) and on periodicals, their acquisition and organization. In the Director we have had the good fortune to have someone thoroughly conversant with the holdings of the Library, with a wide and discriminating knowledge of classical bibliography and an unerring eye for dealers' catalogues. We therefore have used these qualities perhaps unfairly during the last year of his stay in Athens but welcome the opportunity to thank him for all that he has done for the Library over the years; it owes him an unpayable debt.

REPORT OF THE LIBRARIAN OF THE GENNADEION

To the Director,

American School of Classical Studies at Athens:

I have the honor to submit a report on the Gennadius Library for the period April 1968 to March 1969.

The intensive work on the card catalogue, mentioned in several previous reports, reached its climax early last autumn and continued at fever-pitch until the 4th of December 1968. On that (to us) memorable date the micro-filming of the cards was finished. No further revision was possible and for the first time in many months we could in good conscience relax. As photographed the catalogue contained some 110,000 cards. Approximately half of these, or 55,000, were new cards made since mid-1965, when the revision began, and at least 6000 were prepared in the final ten weeks, while the photography was in process.

The published work, in seven stout folio volumes, has now appeared, though copies have not yet reached Athens: Catalogue of the Gennadius Library, American School of Classical Studies (Boston, G. K. Hall & Co., 1969). Thus an obligation of long standing has at last been met. The deed of gift, dated 18 October 1922, by which title to the Gennadius collection passed to the School, stipulated: "The American School shall as soon as practicable complete and publish a subject catalogue of the whole of the said library and collections on the same principles of classification as the sections already catalogued by the Donor." The two-volume catalogue of the Travel Collection published by the late Shirley H. Weber in 1952-53 conformed exactly to the intentions of the Donor. No doubt some other portions of the Library might also, with profit, have merited separate publication. None the less the advantages of a single, complete catalogue are obvious and we may piously hope that the present work, however different in form from what Mr. Gennadius envisioned, would meet his full approval. Certainly it should prove to be a bibliographical tool of great interest and importance and it will make the riches of the Gennadius Library known and accessible to scholars as never before.

Nearly a year ago the publisher proposed that we should plan for eventual supplementary volumes. This proposal was especially welcome as our concentration on remedying the defects of the existing card catalogue necessarily took precedence over the cataloguing of recent acquisitions. It also opened the way to some further work on the old cards even after the catalogue should appear in print.

We have already made considerable progress on what will in time appear as the first supplement and nearly 2000 cards are in a separate file ready to be photographed. (Now that the School has its own microfilming machine this can be done at convenient intervals.) Besides new acquisitions we are including subject entries for many titles already recorded and also revised main entries where substantial additions or corrections seem to warrant the duplication.

Accessions for the period 22 March 1968 to 29 March 1969, despite the demands of the catalogue for eight months of the twelve, show a modest increase over those reported last year: 472 titles against 436 in the previous period. The 472 titles, of which 124 are gifts, represent a total of 512 volumes. A vast backlog of uncatalogued acquisitions still remain, but if we can maintain the pace of the past few months we shall hope to bring our accessions up to date in another year.

I reported last year that we had had access to three private collections in Athens. Our purchase from the third of these finally amounted to 150 titles. The great majority are of the 18th century (in some cases the only copy recorded in Legrand's Bibliographie Hellénique), but there are also a few of the 17th century, eleven of the 16th, and four incunabula (Ficino's translation of Hermes Trismegistos, Treviso, 1471; Bracciolini's translation of Diodorus, Venice, 1476 and Venice, 1496; and Boccaccio's Genealogiae deorum, Venice, 1494). Truly a splendid haul! And from one of the other collections we have recently bought 22 Greek manuscripts, chiefly theological.

The single most exciting acquisition of the year, however, is the Fairfax Murray copy of the 3rd Latin edition of Breydenbach, Peregrinatio in Terram Sanctam, Speier, 1502. The original Gennadius collection included six of the early editions (1486-1522) of Breydenbach, all of which were lost to us in his 1895 sale. The early editions are all rare and because of the woodcuts—the cut of Venice measures 64¼ inches and that of Jerusalem 50 inches—nearly all copies are in some degree defective. Our copy is the one described in H. W. Davies' Bibliography (1911). It is complete and perfect, and may well be the finest copy of this edition in existence. Its acquisition fills a major gap in the Library and it was especially pleasant to locate so choice a volume here in Athens, and in private hands.

Under the auspices of the Friends of the Gennadius Library, two lectures have been held in the Library: "English Influences in Modern Greek Poetry," by Mr. Th. D. Frangopoulos, 22 May 1968; and "Byron's Hellenic Muse" by Professor Leslie A. Marchand, 27 March 1969. This continues the tradition so ably inaugurated by Stewart Perowne and C. William J. Eliot in 1966 and 1967. The 1967 lecture, "Athens in the Time of Lord Byron," has since been published as "Gennadeion Notes, III" in Hesperia, XXXVII, 1968, pp. 134-158, plates 38-55.

One of the temporary casualties of our preoccupation with the catalogue was the omission of two scheduled issues of The Griffon. No. 4 appeared in Spring 1967, no. 5 not until Christmas 1968. The Christmas issue is by way of being a surprise package, consisting of one of Edward Lear's nonsense poems, "The Courtship of the Yonghy-Bonghy-Bò," with a translation into Modern Greek by the well-known painter N. H. Ghika, who has also illustrated the poem and provided a commentary. Apparently a "first" of its kind, the issue may well become a collector's item among Lear enthusiasts. It has been distributed to the Friends of the Gennadius Library and single copies are available at one dollar each. The forthcoming Spring 1969 issue of The Griffon will revert to the usual pattern and contain news of the Library.

Ten of the Library's collection of Lear drawings were exhibited at the Worcester Art Museum last spring, as part of the first major exhibition in America of Lear's original works. For this opportunity to make our collection better known we are indebted to our friend and Trustee Philip Hofer.

The most urgent need of the Library continues to be that of space. Thanks to the initiative of Richard Howland a start has now been made in securing funds and it is our fervent hope that the visit of the Trustees to Athens this spring will make it possible for construction to begin in the not-too-distant future.

After thirty-two years of devoted service to the Gennadius Library, Miss Eurydice Demetracopoulou, the assistant librarian, will retire at the end of June. It is a fact hard to contemplate. Her knowledge of the collections—as all who have worked and studied here can attest—is incomparable, and my own debt to her cannot be measured. Quiet, unassuming, she has been the mainstay of the Library in all its workings. Happily, though emerita, she will continue as part-time reference librarian, at hours of her own choice, this coming year and, we hope, for many years to come.

For the post of assistant librarian we have been fortunate in obtaining the services of Mrs. Sophia Papageorgiou. A graduate of the University of Thessalonike, in Philology, Mrs. Papageorgiou holds a master's degree in Library Science from the University of Illinois and since February 1967 has been employed as a cataloguer at the University of Illinois Library. She and her husband are returning to Greece this spring and she will take up her duties at the Gennadeion in mid-June.

Mrs. James R. McCredie, executive-secretary of the Friends of the Gennadius Library since its inception in 1964, has resigned to take up her new duties here in Athens. Mrs. C. A. Robinson, Jr., has kindly agreed to serve in her stead. To both, for services past, present, and to come, I offer my warmest thanks.

ADDENDUM

By deed of gift to the American School of Classical Studies, dated 5 April 1969, Mme. Hélène Stathatos presented to the Gennadius Library her Macedonian salonaki, the smaller of the two drawing-rooms for which her house has long been famous. All who have ever enjoyed her hospitality at 22 Herodotos Street will remember the charming setting which this room, her own creation, provided. Its fine old woodwork, intricately carved, the magnificent tiles of the fireplace, and the seven superb icons included (with its other furnishings) in the gift make it indeed a museum piece. It is to be installed in the proposed extension of the Gennadius Library and we may all rejoice that it is to be preserved intact, a κτῆμα ἐς αἰῶν.

REPORTS OF THE PROFESSORS OF ARCHAEOLOGY

To the Director, American School of Classical Studies at Athens:

I have the honor to present the following report on my activities during the past year.

In the spring and summer of 1968 most of my time was spent in work on preparing manuscript, selecting illustrations, assembling drawings, etc., for Volume III of the publication on Pylos.

In early July I paid a brief visit to Troy, where it was a great pleasure to see how tidy and orderly the site has been kept, with convenient paths over and about the hill, with neat labels and an attractive Museum, all under the direction of an archaeologist, Dr. Hamit Kartal.

Later in July I went to Pylos and continued there revising and rewriting many sections on the spot until the beginning of September. As usual, I guided the members of the Summer School, this season in two groups, and many other visitors from time to time. In July and August Mr. John Camp, a member of the American School in 1968-69, helped me in a trial excavation below the northeast end of Englianos Hill. It yielded puzzling problems, the solution of which had to be left for another season.

At the end of October I went to Cincinnati, the headquarters of our expedition. There through the winter, with the valiant aid of my colleague Miss Marion Rawson, we have read again all the revised texts. There is more work to be done but we are hopeful that considerable progress has been made.

My warm thanks are tendered to the Director and Mrs. Robinson, Professor Eugene Vanderpool, Dr. Francis Walton, Dr. Mary Zelia Pease Philippides, and all the members of the School's staff who have always extended a helping hand and friendly courtesies.

Respectfully submitted,
CARL W. BLEGEN
Professor of Archaeology

To the Director,

American School of Classical Studies at Athens:

I have the honor of submitting to you the following report concerning my activities for 1968-1969.

During the summer and autumn of 1968 I spent most of my time on publication of the excavations at Isthmia, carried on prior to 1967 by the University of Chicago in close cooperation with the American School of Classical Studies. The text of one volume dealing with the Temples of Poseidon was finished before Christmas. A few additions in the form of appendices remain to be made. The drawings and photographs are now in the hands of the Chairman of the Committee on Publications. As soon as funds are made available, this volume will be ready for the printer.

I spent three months in America during the winter of 1968-1969. While there I lectured at the following institutions: Macalaster College in St. Paul, the University of California in Berkeley and in Los Angeles, Stanford University, the University of Missouri, the University of Chicago, the Florida State University at Tallahassee and the University of Tampa. I gave several more informal lectures to other audiences along the route. At the Annual Meeting of the Archaeological Institute of America in Toronto I presented a paper on "Archaic Wall Paintings at Isthmia."

In the course of the year I have lectured in Athens, Corinth, and Isthmia to students of the American School, to members of the Greek Heritage Symposium, and to several other groups of students and visitors from America.

My article, announced in my report for last year, on The Cyclopean Wall on the Isthmus of Corinth, Addendum, was published in Hesperia for 1968. Two book reviews have appeared in the American Journal of Archaeology, one on The Temple of Zeus at Nemea by B. H. Hill and others, the other on Lampes d'Argos by Anne Bovon.

*The Chairman of the Managing Committee,
American School of Classical Studies at Athens:*

The first year of my appointment as Professor of Archaeology has consisted largely of a leave of absence; personal circumstances made it impossible for me to spend any time in Athens in the calendar year 1968. As of 1969 I shall hope to resume my former migratory way: September through April in Princeton, May to September in Athens.

Although the School does not spell out the duties of its "Professor of Archaeology," I am assuming that my most specific obligation concerns the study and publication of the results of the earlier excavations in the Athenian Agora, while the newly appointed Field Director, Professor T. Leslie Shear Jr., assumes responsibility for both the excavation and study of the new, northern area. Delay in the start of this new phase, caused by difficulties in the acquisition of property, has been frustrating, but it has had the happy result of leaving Professor Shear free to join in completing the fine-tooth-comb, definitive exploration around the southwest corner of the Agora. Since this involved the collation of the new evidence with that produced by the original excavation of the 1930's, close consultation has been necessary. The report of the Field Director will show gratifying results.

The program of publication moves slowly and spasmodically forward. The volume on plain and black-glazed pottery of the classical period by Lucy Talcott and Brian Sparkes is now in page proof. The MS by Sara Immerwahr on the Neolithic and Bronze Age Periods has gone to the printer. Margaret Crosby has submitted a MS embodying the testimonia relating to the Athenian lawcourts in both the original language and English translation, the first attempt at a comprehensive presentation of this intractable material. Miss Crosby's work will form part of a collaborative volume on the lawcourts. Good progress has been reported within the year on the second volume on pottery of the Roman period (Henry S. Robinson and John Hayes), on the third volume on sculpture (Evelyn B. Harrison), on the miscellaneous small finds (Anna Benjamin and Neda Leipen), and on the post-Herulian monuments (Alison Frantz and John Travlos).

For my own part I may note the near completion of a general account of the results of the Agora excavations in collaboration with R. E. Wycherley. A study of the so-called Temple of Pythian Apollo on the Aegean island of Sikinos has been completed by Alison Frantz, John Travlos and myself. The project is relevant to the Agora excavations inasmuch as the "Temple," actually an heroön of the 3rd century after Christ, provides one of the best known parallels for the conversion of the Athenian Hephaisteion to Christian use. In collaboration with W. B. Dinsmoor, Jr., I have been engaged in a new study of the Temple of Athena Sounias in which account is taken of both the existing remains at Cape Sounion and the architectural elements of the building that have come to light in the Agora.

Most of the major groups of material yielded by the original excavations in the Agora have been assigned to senior scholars who devote to their research as much time as permitted by their academic duties. But much other material still languishes, notably certain categories of coins, architectural terracottas, individual architectural monuments and specific topographical problems. Offers of assistance will be deeply appreciated either from members of the Managing Committee or from advanced students capable of independent study whom they may wish to recommend.

*To the Director,
American School of Classical Studies at Athens:*

I have the honor to submit the following report on my activities during the past year.

I have worked with the students as usual, conducting trips to Northwestern Greece and the Peloponnesus and lecturing on the topography and monuments of Athens and Attica.

Two short articles of mine have appeared in Volume 23 of the Ἀρχαιολογικὸν Δελτίον, one entitled "Three Inscriptions from Eleusis," the other "Notes on Readings." I have submitted to Hesperia another short article on "Some Attic Inscriptions."

I am now working on ostraca with a view to giving two lectures on the subject this spring at the University of Cincinnati.

REPORT OF THE FIELD DIRECTOR OF THE AGORA EXCAVATIONS

To the Director,

American School of Classical Studies at Athens:

I have the honor to submit the following report on the excavations in the Athenian Agora during the year 1968-69.

It has been a year of transition at the Agora, a year in which the principal effort was to complete the definitive exploration of the original Agora concession and to concentrate as well upon the program of publication. But equally it was a year of preparation in which the excavation marshaled its forces for its next major campaign to the north of the Athens-Piraeus Railway. On occasion one stood Janus-like at St. Philip's gate gazing at once southward over the achievements of 36 years of excavation and northward to the shops and houses along Hadrian Street which conceal the discoveries of future years.

STAFF

In anticipation of the resumption of extensive excavations, the personnel of the Agora has undergone several changes and additions during the period under review. In January of 1968, Professor Homer A. Thompson turned over the active direction of the excavations to the care of the undersigned in order that he might devote himself fully to the definitive publication of the site.

During the excavating season of 1968, field work was supervised by Miss Alison Frantz, Miss Stella Grobel of Bryn Mawr College, Mr. John McK. Camp of Harvard University, and Mrs. Carol Thomas of the University of Washington at Seattle. All of us who shared responsibility for the field work are particularly indebted to Professor Eugene Vanderpool who gave freely of his time and his experience to assist the progress of the excavations in countless ways. A steady volume of architectural work continues to flow from the skilled hands of John Travlos and William B. Dinsmoor, Jr. who have been assisted in the drafting room by Miss Helen Besi. Mrs. Poly Demoulini continues to serve as Secretary of the Agora Excavations and assumes charge of the records department. In the summer of 1968 Eugene Vanderpool, Jr. once again undertook the photography for the excavation during two periods at the beginning and the end of the season, and his place was taken during the intervening months by David Walton.

Side by side with the excavations, several senior scholars of the Agora family pursued their various researches in the Stoa of Attalos. Miss Virginia Grace, assisted by Mrs. Maria Petropoulakou and Andreas Demoulinis, carried forward her study of amphorae. The summer months saw the customary influx of migratory scholars studying assorted classes of objects for final publication: Professors Anna Benjamin (minor objects), Evelyn Harrison (sculpture of the classical period), Mabel Lang (graffiti and dipinti) and Evelyn Smithson (protogeometric pottery).

The Agora is fortunate to have the continued loyalty of the Greek technical staff, headed by Basileios Adamakos as general foreman, and at present consisting of a general technician, a photographic assistant, an accountant, and a cleaning woman.

As in recent years, we acknowledge gratefully also the assistance of several volunteers who have contributed their time and effort to the Records Department. This year such help was received from Mrs. Mary Nicholas, Mrs. Donna Spieth, Miss Margaret Stevenson and Miss Elizabeth Finkenstaedt.

Recent weeks have seen the appointment of two new members to the Agora staff in the capacity of Agora Fellows. Miss Stella Grobel, of Oberlin and Bryn Mawr Colleges, and Mr. Stephen G. Miller of Wabash College and Princeton University, will both take office for two year terms at the beginning of the 1969 excavating season and will help to form a nucleus of younger scholars who will assume responsibility for the new excavations.

PUBLICATIONS

Some of the most valuable work now in progress at the Agora is the definitive publication of objects and monuments found in the original Agora concession. A score of scholars is currently engaged in preparing monographs on various aspects of the excavation and these will appear in time as part of the Athenian Agora series. No new volumes have been added to this series during the present year, but Agora XII, Black and Plain Pottery of the 6th, 5th and 4th Centuries B. C. by Brian Sparkes and Lucy Talcott should be completed within the next year. Agora XIII, the Neolithic and Bronze Ages by Sara Anderson Immerwahr has been turned over to the printer. The other series of Agora publications, the Picture Books, was augmented during the summer of 1968 by the publication of Waterworks in the Athenian Agora (Picture Book No. 11) by Mabel Lang.

FIELD WORK

During the summer months of 1968, supplementary excavations were conducted about the southwestern corner of the market square where some of the principal ancient streets of Athens entered the Agora, from the early classical until the late Roman periods. Our work yielded satisfactory results which shed light on the topography and especially the long history of several structures in this area.

Under the supervision of Mr. John McK. Camp, stratified deposits were explored beneath the western end of the Middle Stoa, and these yielded a significant section of the classical road which led into the center of the Agora from the slopes of the Areopagus. At a point where the street opened into the square, a large, rectangular monument was erected in the years about 430 B. C. The foundation for its imposing base (9.80 m. x 2.25 m.) was so placed that it partially obstructed the thoroughfare and would have been immediately visible to everyone entering or leaving the Agora. Excavation of the stratified fill beside the monument has now enabled us to reconstruct its history. After its construction in the closing years of the Periclean period, the monument stood for about three-quarters of a century until its systematic demolition in the mid-fourth century B. C. Various pieces of evidence combine to suggest the identification of this foundation as the original site for the monument of the Eponymous Heroes, whose familiar peribolos opposite the porch of the Metroon is now known to have been constructed about the middle of the fourth century, although literary and historical testimonia make it certain that the monument existed elsewhere as early as 424 B. C.

The area about the southwestern corner of the Agora was originally excavated in part in 1931 and 1932, but it included as well the last bit of unexcavated terrain within the archaeological zone. During the past season, Miss Stella Grobel undertook the task of laying bare the entire area, and she was assisted for part of the summer by Mrs. Carol Thomas, who supervised the reopening of the previously excavated sections and began the definitive architectural study of the remains. In the first block of small, private buildings just outside the market square, Miss Grobel brought to light the remains of a modest structure which enjoyed a long history as a workshop and residence. The surviving architectural remains consist chiefly of a row of small rooms bordering the principal east-west street just at its intersection with the street leading into the Agora. Stratified floor levels in at least five of the rooms showed that the building had seen continuous use for over a century and a half as a sculptor's studio and marble worker's atelier. The earliest floor of the house was laid over a massive filling of broken pottery, roof tiles, and architectural and sculptural fragments characteristic of the Persian destruction of Athens in 480 B. C. The leveling of this debris and the construction of the building must then have occurred early in the second quarter of the fifth century. The house underwent various architectural modifications about the end of the fifth century but continued to be used as a marble worker's shop until its final destruction at the very end of the fourth century.

In the courtyard of the house were two cisterns, one of which was opened in 1932 by Mrs. Dorothy B. Thompson, while the other, discovered in the current season, proved to be equipped with a tile-lined well sunk beneath its floor. This latter cistern produced quantities of pottery which had once filled the china cupboards of the household. In addition to the usual cooking pots and other domestic vessels, there were a great many pieces of black-glazed ware of the finest quality including a set of kantharoi which must have graced the symposia of the last master of the house. By a happy chance the first and last owners of the house are known to us by name. On the earliest floor was found a polished bone tool bearing the signature of the sculptor Mikion, while his distant descendant, the last owner of the house, had scratched his name Menon on several of the drinking cups found in one of the cisterns. The newly discovered cistern in the courtyard also yielded a large and important group of terracotta figurines, many of which had been fashioned from the same moulds. So numerous and of such fine quality were the terracottas that they seemed to have come from some neighboring coroplast's shop where they may have formed part of his stock of merchandise for retail sale.

In addition to these areas of excavation, the large complex of late Roman baths on the northwestern slopes of the Areopagus was also subjected to definitive architectural investigation. Miss Alison Frantz conducted a series of soundings beneath the latest surviving floors in order to reveal earlier architectural phases of the building. Detailed studies of the architectural remains were undertaken by Messrs. John Travlos and William B. Dinsmoor, Jr. The earliest bathing establishment on the site proved to be a circular bath room of the second century B. C., which was probably originally equipped with individual marble tubs arranged radially. After extensive renovation in the first century B. C., this structure was replaced by a larger bath whose principal rooms were paved with floors of pebble mosaic. This building in turn gave way to a large vaulted structure of the Hadrianic period which forms the major ruins on the site today. The Hadrianic bath included several large halls constructed with hypocausts and furnaces for central heating. Remains of pools for hot and cold bathing, dressing rooms, and a latrine could also be identified. This building sustained heavy damage in the Herulian sack of A. D. 267, but it was extensively refurbished and remodelled in the fourth century and continued to serve as a bath until late in the sixth century after Christ.

The principal financial support for the Agora Excavations during the past season was once again, as in recent years, the interest which has accrued on the grant from the Ford Foundation. The principal of the grant is specifically earmarked to finance the new excavations on the north side and has been reserved for that purpose. In fact, the expenses for the archaeological field work of 1968 were covered in large measure by several generous contributions which we acknowledge with particular gratitude. The University of Washington at Seattle not only contributed a considerable sum to assist in the financing of the enterprise, but also provided two members of their faculty, Professor Colin Edmonson and Mrs. Carol Thomas, who joined the Agora staff for the summer. The excavation fund benefited also from the generosity of two other old friends of the Agora, Miss Margaret Crosby and Mr. Peter E. Demarest.

It is a pleasure also to express our gratitude to our Greek colleagues in the Service of Antiquities, and especially to Mr. George Dontas, ephor of the first archaeological district. He has assisted the work of the Agora in many ways and always with a most cordial friendliness.

NEW EXCAVATIONS

The next major phase in the exploration of the ancient civic center of Athens will commence in all likelihood during the spring and summer of 1969. Thanks to a generous subvention from the Greek Government, the acquisition of property for the new excavations has moved rapidly in recent months. On March 8, 1968, the Greek Government ordered the expropriation of a group of 18 properties bordering the south side of Hadrian Street and lying between it and the Athens-Piraeus Railway. These lots form a strip spanning the full width of the Agora on its north side, from the Stoa of Zeus on the west to the Stoa of Attalos on the east. The legal proceedings for the acquisition of these properties were completed in about a year's time, and on March 24, 1969, the decree was published in the Government Gazette declaring the properties to be expropriated and to belong now to the Greek State. In the coming weeks, we shall be taking steps to secure the evacuation of the present tenants preparatory to demolition of the existing buildings. There is an air of hopeful expectancy in the workrooms of the Stoa of Attalos as all members of the Agora staff prepare for the breaking of new ground, confident that the city of Athens still holds many secrets in her soil, which she may be persuaded to yield up to yet another generation of archaeologists.

REPORT OF THE FIELD DIRECTOR OF THE CORINTH EXCAVATIONS

To the Director,

American School of Classical Studies at Athens:

I have the honor to present the report of the activities of the American School of Classical Studies in Ancient Corinth during the academic year 1968-1969.

The personnel of the School in Corinth remains the same as it was in the previous year: Miss Kathryn Butt, Secretary of the Excavations; Photis Notis, foreman of the excavation, assisted full-time by Demetrios Papaioannou; Pavlos Daphnis, manager and cook of Oakley House; and Nikolaos Didaskalou and Anastasios Papaioannou, full-time pot-menders in the museum. From the end of September until the middle of December the excavation had the good fortune of enjoying the skills and knowledge of Professor and Mrs. Alfred Bellinger. They made a sizeable step forward in the program to make the excavation coins more easily usable by reorganizing and identifying coins of the excavation. It remains, however, for a student of numismatics or other interested scholar to continue the identification and organization and to work toward the eventual publication of the recent coins, as well as to restudy old excavation coins.

Dr. Nancy Bookidis has worked at Corinth from June 1968 on the excavation of the Demeter sanctuary of Acrocorinth and, during the fall and winter, has studied the terracotta sculpture from that sanctuary. Miss Bookidis excavated for two months (her report will appear in Hesperia, XXXVIII, 3, 1969) but excavation was cut short by exceedingly early and heavy rains. Her excavation season was thus shorter than planned. The American Association of University Women is to be thanked for giving Miss Bookidis the fellowship which has made it possible for her to study the terracotta sculpture from the Demeter sanctuary. The fellowship was supplemented by grants from the American Philosophical Society and from the American Council of Learned Societies.

The Corinth Excavations continue to use the talents of the two Greek photographers, Misses Ioannidou and Bartzioti. As well, late in June and during the months of July and August, Mr. Michael Goldstein, a graduate student from the University of California at Berkeley, photographed for the excavation. His project was mainly to photograph the terracotta sculpture from the Demeter sanctuary of Acrocorinth. The rest of his time was devoted to photographing the marble sculpture which has accumulated for many years without having been photographed. He also developed excavation film for the University of Texas excavation in a dark room that was reconstituted in the basement of Oakley House.

New Dexion shelving has been erected in the west workroom of the museum. This has made possible the moving of the sculpture collection from its crowded quarters in the basement to the new shelving where the marbles no longer need to be stacked piece upon piece. The new arrangement will facilitate the future study of sculpture. The basement space from which the statuary has been removed now serves for the storage of the pottery from the North Cemetery Excavation of Dr. Shear; the space will also serve in the future for new excavation pottery. Mrs. Alan Boegehold has kindly devoted many days to the reorganization of the sculpture; Miss Butt has proceeded with the ordering and shelving of the North Cemetery pottery.

The Gorham P. Stevens Fellowship in Architecture was awarded this year to Mr. Thomas Boyd. Mr. Boyd arrived in Greece early and worked during some of August and September on Temple Hill, measuring the whole top of the hill for a new, detailed drawing of the remains. This project is being coordinated with the excavation there by Dr. Henry S. Robinson, Director of the School. During the winter Mr. Boyd remained in Athens, participating in the School program there; he did, however, have time to work on Corinthian plans that could be altered or changed from notes and drawings supplied to him.

Again this year Corinth has offered its facilities and services to numerous other excavations. Demetrios Papaioannou last spring shared the duties (on a part-time basis) of foreman to the Isthmia excavation of Professor Paul Clement; during the summer he served as foreman for Professor John Caskey at Kea. A Corinthian workman, A. Arberoris, was employed by the School's salvage excavation at Elean Pylos this past summer; a pot-mender from Corinth also served on the same excavation. N. Didaskalou, the chief pot-mender of Corinth, was sent to Porto Cheli for the summer excavation of the Universities of Pennsylvania and Indiana. In the fall he worked when needed at Nauplion on more of the Porto Cheli material.

The excavation house and excavation materials were used by numerous passing scholars. Those from foreign schools who stayed for extended periods included Mr. W. Phelps of the British School, who studied Neolithic materials, Mr. O. Harl of the Austrian Archaeological Institute, who studied the late classical and Hellenistic antefixes of our roof tile collection, Mr. R. Wünscher, who studied the prehistoric material, and Mr. K. Wallenstein, who was interested in the terracotta figurines. The last two were both from the German Archaeological Institute.

Within the form of this report I would like to take the occasion to thank everyone who has been a part of making available funds for the new Oakley House which we hope to have under construction this summer. The old building, although continuously replastered, repainted, and repaired, is showing its age. Its fabric is weak and dangerous to all occupying the building when Corinth has earth tremors. The plans for a new unit to replace Oakley House have been started. The present Annex, however, will remain and continue to be used. The new building will include three bedrooms, three offices, a library as well as a living room and dining room, a kitchen, and service quarters. The library becomes more and more necessary as more demands are made on students to study the excavation finds during the excavation season and because more visiting and resident scholars are staying at Corinth during the winter who need a quiet place, if not an office, in which to work and type. The three offices are planned, one for the director of the excavations, the second for the secretary, the third to serve as drafting room for the architect with room to store all architectural drawings now stored in the museum. A dark room is also planned and it is hoped that all photographic negatives and records can be removed from the museum to the new house so that they can be available to the School at those times when the museum is closed. The kitchen facilities will be expanded, for greater numbers of meals are being served than in the past; the space for preparation and storage of food in the present house is minimal.

EXCAVATIONS

The spring excavations of the American School started with its two-week training session for all members of the School who wished to participate. This session was conducted in the area of the bath north of the Peribolos of Apollo with Messrs. DeVries, Kawashima, Lavezzi, Loomis, Sams, Small, Traill, Tulloch, and Walbank, and Misses Schanz and Yakel participating. Messrs. DeVries, Lavezzi, Sams, and Walbank, and Miss Yakel continued with the main excavation thereafter. Miss Norton and Mrs. Sams helped Miss Butt in the museum; Miss Norton also dug in the area of the Babbis monument for two weeks.

Mr. William Biers, Secretary of the School through June, 1968, continued the excavation of the Roman bath north of the modern plateia of Ancient Corinth, capably aided by his wife. The main purpose of this year's work was to solve problems that had accumulated during the three earlier campaigns in order to publish the remains that have been uncovered. This year more of the herringbone paved court and marble façade that faces the Lechaion Road were exposed. More fallen marble members from the façade were recovered. Also a complete victor's list of the Caesarean Games, A. D. 127, was found, re-used in the bath.

Miss Bookidis excavated a series of dining and cult rooms in the Demeter sanctuary on the north slope of Acrocorinth. The chronology that had previously been established for the sanctuary, continuous use from the 6th century B. C. through the late Roman period, was found to be applicable here also. A complex sequence of building, alteration, and rebuilding was found throughout the newly excavated area.

The Greek levels under the Roman forum were probed in two places, first around the Sacred Spring and secondly along the west side of the Babbis Monument. The report of this excavation appeared in Hesperia, XXXVIII, 1969, pp. 36-63. Excavation just east of the Sacred Spring and its associated triglyph wall has revealed over two meters of classical and Hellenistic fill. Much important information is being developed from the excavation in this area; the strata are easily distinguished because of the accumulated hard-packed surfaces and different types and colors of soil. We have recovered a clear sequence of pottery which will help to establish the history of the temenos; the area, however, is extremely complex and we feel that at least three more seasons will be needed in which to examine all of the levels and to retrieve the necessary information.

The most surprising discovery in the area was that of a low mud altar over eight and three-fourths meters long, rebuilt at least four times. The altar lies immediately east of the fountain house of the Sacred Spring and was in use until shortly after the Peloponnesian War. Finds from the area include many bronze earrings and Attic and Corinthian lekythoi, dated to the fifth and fourth centuries. After the lekythos form lost popularity, it was replaced in the sanctuary by the fusiform unguentarium.

The second area excavated in the agora, the west side of the Babbis Monument, was dug for two reasons; first, that Mr. Lavezzi was interested in the prehistoric material which Professor Saul Weinberg had previously found here and was anxious to dig Neolithic levels, and second, that the Director of the Excavations wanted to test the area to see if the west end of the Hellenistic race course could be found here. The track was not found; it appears that the race course never extended to the canonical stadium length. The Neolithic fill was found, however, as well as an extremely interesting Protogeometric grave cut into the Neolithic level.

The summer excavation of the University of Texas continued its work in the Roman gymnasium of Corinth. The work was focused on a bronze casting pit and its associated moulds, on an apsidal building with lead curse tablets found against its walls, and, finally, on a large underground tunnel system that connected with Lerna. Here an underground fountain house with marble veneered basins was found. The number of lamps found in association with the fountain was enormous: 179 whole lamps of the late 4th and 5th centuries after Christ, as well as many fragmentary ones.

The Director of the School, Dr. Robinson, returned to Corinth for part of the summer with Mrs. Robinson to work on the remains of Temple Hill. Dr. Robinson has commenced a study of the hill, concentrating on the 7th century and 6th century temples and their associated remains. His excavation and study will be continued during the spring of 1969.

Little excavation was done during the winter months except for a group of graves that were found during deep plowing in a field north of the modern village of Anaploga. Most of the graves had been robbed. Seven, however, still preserved their contents; the pottery shows that the area was used as a cemetery from the Late Geometric through the middle Hellenistic period.

REPORT OF THE SPECIAL RESEARCH FELLOWS

To the Director,

American School of Classical Studies at Athens:

I have the honor to report on my year as Visiting Professor at the American School of Classical Studies.

During the fall, I accompanied the students on two of the long trips and several of the shorter ones; from late November until mid-March, I held a seminar in which we examined aspects of early Greek use of documents. Ten to twelve students attended regularly, and nine gave reports. The quality of the reports was good, and an adequate number showed competence in Greek.

The after-tea talks initiated by Sterling Dow were resumed this year, and I recommend they be continued. Most of us found ourselves becoming profitably interested in each other's work when we had an opportunity to hear an informal but organized account of work in progress. This year Willson Cummer spoke on an unidentified Roman monument at Kenchreai, Keith De Vries on Boeotian Geometric pottery, Jon Mikalson on Homeric gods, Judith Binder on the west pediment of the Parthenon, Eugene Vanderpool on three prize vases, Stephen Miller on the Prytaneion at Athens, Henry Robinson on the "Mourning (?) Athena" stele, Joseph Conant on διάνοια in Thucydides, E. Hector Williams on the Homeric μεσόδμη, John Lavezzi on Neolithic pottery, Mary Sturgeon on an enigmatic group of sculptures, Michael Walbank on proxy decrees, Richmond Lattimore on Greek tragedy, Peter Green on the "Themistokles Decree," Alan Boegehold on the state archive at Athens, Frederick Cooper on Bassae, and Stella Grobel on the Philippeion at Olympia.

My own time has been given to various epigraphical studies and continuing investigation of Athenian administrative and judicial procedures. I have given one lecture on Athenian law courts to the Greek Heritage Seminar, and another to the College Year at Athens, for whom a third is scheduled in April.

It has been an idyllic year. The students, taken as a group, strike me as being about the best I have seen at the School. The School program of studies, trips, lectures, and seminars has now become so full that students must be selective in order to find time for projects of their own, yet I cannot recommend the omission of any single offering. The students are generally capable of making their own selections and ordering their own time, and while it may be an embarrassment to have to choose between so much that is good and useful, it is the sort of choice with which the School should confront its students.

Respectfully submitted,
ALAN L. BOEGEHOLD
Visiting Professor

To the Director,

American School of Classical Studies at Athens:

I have the honor of submitting my report as Visiting Professor for the academic year 1968-69.

My wife and I, with one child, arrived in Athens on September 2, 1968, and moved immediately into the West House. The month of September was spent in settling in Athens, refamiliarizing ourselves with Athens and its surroundings, and establishing ourselves at the School. We had not been in Athens for some time, and there was much to relearn and to learn for the first time.

During the fall term I was fortunate to be able to go on three of the School trips (all but the Argolid, and even on that my family and I managed to rendezvous with the group briefly at Nauplion), my wife succeeding in making one (the Peloponnese). It was an experience I consider to have been all but indispensable for myself. Over and above the intensive review of ancient sites (in some cases it was even a first visit for me) I had on the trips an invaluable opportunity to come to know the students. In my opinion the trips were extraordinarily successful (though I have no prior experience with which to compare them), and the students participated fully and enthusiastically. I cannot forbear to express my high valuation of the students as individuals and as a group. As a group they are far from homogeneous (there is, for example, great diversity of preparation, which might be thought a difficulty), but in their several ways they are for the most part very good, even the younger students. At the same time, they are congenial among themselves and with us. Indeed, they compose a very attractive and satisfactory group of students. The Admissions Committee is to be congratulated on their selection.

During the winter term I offered a seminar in Euripides, which was gratifyingly attended by most of the first-year students, the principal exceptions being those who had special projects of their own. I say "gratifyingly" because the seminar had a literary and philological orientation, and students with that orientation are in a minority, as usual. I was pleased, and the seminar sessions were enriched, by the diversity. We had the special pleasure of having Professor Richmond Lattimore, who was visiting in Athens, attend four (I think) of the last sessions. I read Theocritus informally with two young women, one of whom thinks of a dissertation in Hellenistic literature, though she has not yet settled on a topic. I went as well (and so did Mrs. Conant) on a good many of the Friday trips (missing at least two only because of the flu) and attended some of the Tuesday and Thursday sessions. Professor Boegehold and I reactivated the informal sessions on Monday afternoons, after tea, in the living room of the West House, and we both consider that the program was very successful, most satisfying, and even fruitful. I might say here that, at least in my view, the West House is the most generally satisfactory site; only those who want to need attend, and the living room accommodates the group comfortably and informally. It was a very full and enjoyable winter.

My family and I shall stay in the West House through August. I shall continue to work, chiefly on Euripidean and later Greek drama and Plato, in the library, but I hope to make a number of trips to sites I have not seen, some of them, I hope, in the excavating season. My wife, who has ardently been learning Greek dances, I am sure would join me in saying that this year in Athens has been, and continues to be, an incomparable one. For their help and friendship, we are indebted to Professor and Mrs. Robinson, Professor Vanderpool, Professor and Mrs. Walton, to our colleagues Professor and Mrs. Boegehold, and, of course, to the library staffs of the Library of the School and of the Gennadeus Library.

Respectfully submitted,

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF THE SCHOOL

To the Director,

American School of Classical Studies at Athens:

I have the honor to submit the following report on my activities during the past year.

Since assuming office on July 1, 1968, after cheerful tutelage by my friend and predecessor, William Biers, I have assisted the Director in the recurrent matters of administration, housing, maintenance, and other agenda pertaining to the daily operation of the School. I have lately been working on arrangements, for the most part completed, for the 1969 Summer Sessions, drawing upon experience with the first double Summer Sessions in 1968. I have in the course of this year been privileged to discuss for the students of the School, particularly on the fall and winter trips, several prehistoric sites and topics, and I have lectured at Mycenae for an Oriental Institute tour group.

With the kind cooperation of the Director, I have been able to carry forward in a number of ways my dissertational research on pattern-burnished wares of the prehistoric Aegean, as well as to study first-hand the prehistoric pottery from the recent excavations on Temple Hill in Corinth. In addition I have been enabled to make a number of brief study-trips to various parts of Greece.

This spring I shall again be honored to join the excavations of Mr. Charles K. Williams, II, at Corinth.

I wish to express my deep appreciation to the Greek staff of the School for their unfailing and cheerful assistance in so many matters. I would also thank Professor Robert Scranton and the University of Chicago for help in making possible my stay in Greece. I acknowledge most gratefully the stimulating association I have had with the academic community of the School, especially Professor Vanderpool. Finally, I wish to thank the Managing Committee and to express my deepest gratitude to the Director of the School, with whom, and with which, I am proud to have been associated.

Respectfully submitted,
JOHN C. LAVEZZI
Secretary of the School

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON ADMISSIONS AND FELLOWSHIPS

To the Members of the Managing Committee:

I have the honor to present the report of the Committee on Admissions and Fellowships. On February 7-8, 1969 fourteen candidates wrote the examinations in sight translation and history; eight of these chose literature as their third examination; six chose archaeology. The top eight candidates were as follows:

- Mr. Donald Lateiner (A. B. Chicago, M. A. Cornell, now at Stanford)—
Literature
Mr. Joseph Breslin (B. A. Toronto, M. A. Berkeley, now at Berkeley)—
Literature
Miss Sharon Herbert (A. B. Stanford, now at Stanford)—Archaeology
Mr. Gerald Culley (B. A. Kentucky, now at North Carolina)—Literature
Miss Leslie Preston (A. B. Bryn Mawr, M. A. Cincinnati, now at Cincinnati)—Archaeology
Miss Diane Rennell (A. B. Cornell, now at Chicago)—Literature
Mr. George Rochefort (A. B., M. A. Boston College, now at Tufts)—
Literature
Mr. John Younger (A. B. Stanford, now at Cincinnati)—Archaeology

The Committee recommends that the following awards be made:

- | | |
|--|----------------------|
| Thomas Day Seymour Fellowship to Mr. Lateiner | Miss Rennell and |
| James Rignall Wheeler Fellowship to Mr. Breslin | Mr. Rochefort as |
| James C. Loeb Fellowship to Mr. Culley | first and second al- |
| | ternates. |
| John Williams White Fellowship to Miss Herbert | Mr. Younger as al- |
| George Henry McFadden Fellowship to Miss Preston | ternate in archae- |
| | ology. |

All fourteen candidates were admitted to the School; twelve accepted admission. Since all five fellowship nominees accepted the awards, no fellowship passed to an alternate.

Eight other applicants for regular membership took the qualifying examination. Although these were ranked so that some could be admitted immediately to make up the desired student body of sixteen while others made up a waiting list, there was so little to differentiate them that it seemed good to ask if a larger student body might not be possible for next year. Word came from Athens indicating a willingness to experiment, and the final list for 1969/70 includes nineteen regular first-year members.

All of the four applications for associate membership were approved, with the usual cautions about limited privileges. Three of these were able to accept.

Henry Robinson recommended that E. Hector Williams be named Edward Capps Fellow for 1969/70 honoris causa, although he will actually hold a Canada Council grant. He further recommends that the stipend thereof be granted to Frederick Cooper, who like Williams has been a first-year member this year. For the Stevens Fellowship Joseph Shaw is recommended, to continue his study of the materials and techniques of Minoan architecture.

The Committee wishes to thank those members of the Managing Committee who have taken considerable time to advise students, set and arrange examinations, and the like.

Respectfully submitted,
MABEL L. LANG

REPORT OF THE CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE ON PUBLICATIONS

*To the Members of the Managing Committee of the
American School of Classical Studies at Athens:*

I have the honor to present the report of the activity of the Committee on Publications for the year July 1, 1968 to April 20, 1969. The members of the Committee included Lloyd W. Daly, Benjamin D. Meritt, Charles H. Morgan, James H. Oliver (resigned as of December 29, 1968), Homer A. Thompson, Richard H. Howland ex officio and Lucy Shoe Meritt, Chairman. Anne McCabe Twele continued to serve as Secretary. As Sales Assistant Kathleen Clagett acted from July 1 to September 15 and from October 1 to April 1 Dora Woodhead generously volunteered her expert services as she has done previously, for which the Committee is hard put to express its appreciation adequately. Since April 1 Alice Roberts Dunn has filled this three-quarter time position. Two regular meetings of the Committee were held on November 10, 1968 and April 20, 1969 at the Institute for Advanced Study and a brief meeting was held on December 29, 1968, at the A. I. A.-A. P. A. meetings in Toronto. We deeply regret the loss of Mr. Oliver after years of faithful, judicious service.

Once more it is my pleasant privilege to record the gratitude which it is so impossible to express adequately of the Committee to the Institute for Advanced Study for its continuing generous contributions of many kinds to the work of the Committee. This generosity over a period of 30 years from the beginning of Benjamin Meritt's chairmanship of the Committee on Publications through the past 19 years of the expanded work of the Committee has been of incalculable value to the School; the Committee on Publications takes pleasure in reminding the Managing Committee that without this very material support the work on the School's publications could not have been done. Nor is it too early to urge the Committee to be planning for a new location of publications operations after another three years.

Last year we were able to report a subscription list nearing the 800 mark; as of April 20, 1969 the number is 820, of which 31 are free, 88 exchange, and 701 paid, including a welcome number of individual subscribers as well as the ever increasing number of libraries of new institutions. In spite of the larger number of current field reports which we now publish thanks to the more numerous excavations conducted under the auspices of the School than formerly, we are still able to maintain a variety in the fare offered our readers. In addition to the general preliminary reports on current excavations (which by your instructions to the Committee are given top priority) there are more detailed studies of excavation material and articles on a variety of historical and archaeological subjects and material from Neolithic to Turkish times studied by the staff and the students of the School, plus whenever space permits the most welcome work of our Alumni, inspired originally by their sojourn at the School. It is only, however, by publishing at least the size numbers of Hesperia we have recently been issuing that we can keep our waiting list of reasonable length. This can only be done with a budget of not less than $16,000 for Hesperia and Overhead. The articles waiting now include:

- Biers, William R., "Excavations at Phlius, The Prehistoric Deposits"
- Bogges, Elizabeth M., "A Hellenistic Pithos from Corinth"
- Bookides, Nancy, "The Sanctuary of Demeter and Kore on Acrocorinth. Preliminary Report III: 1968"
- Bradeen, Donald W., and McGregor, Malcolm F., "The Attic Quota-List of 429/8 B. C."
- Meritt, Benjamin D., and Traill, John S., Part II, Agora Report for 1968
- Thompson, Wesley E., "Notes on the Treasurers of Athena"
- Thompson, Wesley E., "Notes on Attic Demes"
- Vanderpool, Eugene, "Some Attic Inscriptions"
- Wallace, Paul W., "Strabo on Acrocorinth"
- Wiencke, Martha Heath, "Further Seals and Sealings from Lerna"

Current field reports by the Field Directors for the Agora and Porto Cheli are also expected by May 1st.

The Committee is happy to acknowledge most gratefully several gifts toward the publication of individual articles or numbers of Hesperia or projected Supplements; these are very welcome indeed.

Welcome too we trust to all members of the Managing Committee will be the news just received from Swets and Zeitlinger that they have completed the reprint of Hesperia, Volumes I-XXX which are accordingly now available once more. Orders should be placed directly with Swets and Zeitlinger.

The Committee has received and considered and recommends with pleasure the publication as Hesperia, Supplement XIII of a manuscript by James H. Oliver on Marcus Aurelius, Hadrian and Augustus, Aspects of Civic and Cultural Policy in the East. $5000 should be budgeted for it; of this sum $500 has been generously contributed. Another study which should also appear appropriately as a Supplement has been accepted by the Committee which is happy to recommend its publication as Supplement XIV, namely Homer A. Thompson and William B. Dinsmoor, Jr., The Sanctuary of Athena at Sounion. Since the Committee knows the limitations of the School's budget and since with the other volumes being edited and in press it is unlikely that the full cost of this volume will need to be paid during the next fiscal year, the Committee asks for only a portion of the cost to be budgeted in 1969-1970. A much appreciated gift of $1980 has already been made toward the cost of this volume.

It is with very genuine satisfaction that the Committee reports that the Hesperia Index to Volumes XI-XX was put on sale in September 1968. The brisk sales confirm the need it is filling.

BOOKS

The other new book published since our last report has been Picture Books of the Excavations of the Athenian Agora, No. 11, Waterworks in the Athenian Agora, by Mabel Lang; it has been well received and is selling nicely, as are all the titles. Three are being reprinted again now.

Of the two volumes previously reported as in press, the large Athenian Agora, XII, Black and Plain Pottery of the 6th, 5th and 4th Centuries B. C. by Brian Sparkes and Lucy Talcott is still some months from completion. The other, the first volume of the new Lerna series, The Fauna by N-G. Gejvall should be published during the summer. Another Athenian Agora volume, XIII, The Neolithic and Bronze Ages by Sara Anderson Immerwahr is also in press. The Committee is most grateful for generous gifts for these volumes.

Two new volumes have been accepted for publication. Of them Athenian Agora, XIV, Topography and Monuments by Homer A. Thompson and R. E. Wycherley need not be budgeted since it like Volumes XII and XIII will be financed from Agora Phase B Publications Funds. The other is the publication by Oscar Broneer of The Temple of Poseidon at Isthmia. Although the excavation was conducted without funds from the School it was part of the School's Corinth permit and was directed by Professor Broneer, a professor on our staff. In accepting this volume for publication by the School the Committee emphasizes that it makes no commitment for further volumes on Isthmia. A substantial proportion of the cost will be contributed from outside, but the Committee asks for some funds to start this volume through the press during 1969-1970.

Our sales have continued to be so good that our cupboard is now bare of many titles. We shall welcome the several new volumes already in press or soon to go. With so depleted a stock it does not seem realistic to budget as high a figure of income from sales next year as this, but we can hope that we may be pleasantly surprised. The royalties from the sale of reprinted Hesperia have helped considerably this year; we dare not expect as much next year. The Chairman cannot close this report without a record, however brief and inadequate for the purpose, of the inestimable debt owed by the Committee on Publications and the School to two members who retire from the Committee this year after years of devoted service so far beyond the call of duty that those outside the Committee can only dimly comprehend what their wisdom, their wide and long experience, their fairness in judgment, their selfless loyalty and devotion have meant to the publications of the School, Benjamin D. Meritt and Charles H. Morgan,

REPORT OF THE DIRECTOR OF THE SUMMER SESSION II

*To the Managing Committee and to the Director,
American School of Classical Studies at Athens:*

It is a pleasure to report that the second of the two sessions of the Summer School 1968 proved a worthwhile and profitable experiment, and it is hoped that the double session will become a regular feature of the Summer program of the School.

The two sessions were neatly dovetailed, running exactly one week apart, so that the two groups were not in residence in Athens at the same time. The programs, however, were nearly identical, with roughly an equal number of sessions in Athens and days away on field trips. This arrangement had the advantage of continuous use of the facilities of the School, without crowding or requiring additional staff. An added burden was indeed laid upon the administrative and domestic personnel to handle twice the detail of housing, meals, transportation, advance reservations, and financial accounts. The fact that all went as smoothly as it did is a tribute to the willingness and energy of the staff at every level.

Generous thanks are due the Director, Professor Robinson, and the Secretaries of this and the previous years, Mr. Lavezzi and Mr. Biers, respectively, for assuming these additional responsibilities, particularly for the arrangements which have to be completed before the arrival of the summer director. Mr. Walbank, as assistant to the Librarian, gave valuable service in arranging a reserve book shelf and assisting the students with bibliography for their reports. The staff at Loring Hall provided its usual devoted service in the matter of meals and afternoon tea, arrangements for laundry, and much other daily assistance. Mr. Athanasiades and Mr. Sakkas took care of the financial records, museum permits, and many other details in separate accounts for the second session.

The success of the double session was due in large part to the number of guest lecturers who gave willingly of their time and expert knowledge at the various sites and museums. In fact, the program was planned to a large extent around these lectures and personal tours of the excavations and collections. The response to our request for speakers to both sessions was indeed generous as the following list of scholars and topics will attest. The director and students are pleased to take this opportunity to express heartiest thanks and warmest appreciation to each of the following scholars whose lectures on the topics noted maintained the high quality and interest of the session:

C. W. Blegen, Pylos and the Museum at Chora
O. Broneer, Excavations at the Isthmia

W. B. Dinsmoor, Jr., The Temple of Athena at Sounion
W. Donovan, The Site and Battle of Salamis
C. Edmonson (two lectures), The Acropolis North Slope; the Sanctuary of Artemis at Brauron
E. B. Harrison (two lectures), Greek Sculpture in the National Museum, Athens
H. S. Robinson, The Library of Hadrian, the Roman Market, and the Tower of the Winds
R. Scranton and J. Hawthorne, Excavations at Kenchreai
T. L. Shear, Jr., (two lectures), The Athenian Agora; the Agora Museum (Stoa of Attalos)
E. Smithson, The Kerameikos and the Kerameikos Museum
M. Spiro (two lectures), The Byzantine Museum; Daphni
C. Trypanis, Medieval and Modern Greek Poetry
E. Vanderpool, The Propylaea on the Athenian Acropolis
F. Walton, Treasures of the Gennadeion Library at Athens
M. H. Wiencke, Lerna in the Neolithic and Bronze Ages (site and Argos Museum)
C. K. Williams, Excavations at Corinth and the Corinth Museum

The field trips followed the traditional itinerary developed over the years. Included were central Greece (Thebes, Aigosthena, Delphi, southern Euboea), the Peloponnesus (Corinthia, the Argolid, Epidauros, Olympia, Pylos, Tegea, Sparta, and Mistra), the Islands (Crete, including Knossos, Mallia, and the Messara; Mykonos, Delos, Aigina, Salamis), and Athens and Attica (Rhamnous, Sounion, Brauron, the Amphiaraion, Piraeus). We were fortunate in having moderate weather, except for one very hot week during the tour of Boiotia and Euboea.

Housing in the apartments leased from the College Year in Athens, with meals taken at Loring Hall, proved a convenient and very satisfactory arrangement.

The enrollment for the entire session was seventeen, not counting two early withdrawals, one for medical reasons and another for employment at the Agora excavations. The group represented a cross-section of graduate and undergraduate students, as well as college and secondary school teachers. The director is grateful to the admissions committee for providing so able and congenial a group. The addition of undergraduates, new this year, is highly to be recommended and encouraged.

Each student presented two oral reports at various museums or sites and, in addition, prepared three brief written assignments on specific topics, based mainly on direct observation. It would be difficult and possibly unfair to single out any one report for special mention. Professor K. Gilmartin's analysis of the Seven Against Thebes, however, preceding the performance of the play at Epidauros, and Donald Mastronarde's on the Siege of Sphakteria come to mind as particularly superior; or Miss Leslie Philipps on the Fall of Mycenae, presented within the shadow of the sally port of the citadel, or Miss Sara Cowan's lively and direct observations on the Greek theatre, particularly at Delphi. Of the written papers it can be stated with confidence that none could have been written with the same immediateness from photographs or published sources alone.

The following recommendations are offered for consideration in the planning of future summer sessions:

- a. That advantage of the double session be taken to include different types of programs, with special emphasis on particular fields or interests.
- b. That the itinerary of the field trips be adjusted more to the summer season in the selection of sites and that a greater effort be made to include more of the recent and current excavations.
- c. That a more flexible and quicker means of transportation be used, such as minibuses or 8-passenger station wagons, to save upwards of one-third of travel time on the field trips.
- d. That strong efforts be continued to enroll qualified undergraduates in the summer program.

Finally, a word of special thanks is due Eugene Vanderpool for valuable briefing sessions before the various field trips. His knowledge of the Greek terrain, practical experience, and timely hints and directions saved us much groping and opened many a new vista in the Greek landscape.

Respectfully submitted,
MATTHEW I. WIENCKE
Director, Summer Session II
