Subject Proofs of article on Cnossus [Knossos] from P.

Keywords Cnossus; Knossos; Pylos; Palace of Nestor;

Notes Article on Cnossus [Knossos] that was sent to Carl W. Blegen for a revised edition of Collier's Encyclopedia. Blegen replied that the article would only be in need of small revisions, but that the two pages on Pylos (attached in this same stack of papers) would need extensive revisions. These proofs should be read in conjunction with Blegen's proposed changes, which appear in items 335, 336, and 337.

Keywords fresco; Piet de Jong; Carl W. Blegen; Effie;

Notes Front and back of page both contain writing. Note from Carl W. Blegen to Piet de Jong sent to confirm his participation at Pylos during the summer of 1955 season. Blegen mentions fresco fragments that need drawing and possibly reassembly, and that he will be having them cleaned by a technician named Zacharias, if he is available. Blegen also reminds de Jong about the guest policy at Pylos, and that Effie will only be able to come to visit for a couple of days. He invites Piet to come out in May, and asks how long he will be available to work. Blegen also mentions that he is preparing to leave New York for Athens on March 6th, 1955. He gives de Jong his address in Greece: 9 Ploutarchou Street.

Notes de Jong mentions that he will see Blegen on March 21st in London, and describes drawing seals for [Doro] Levi (about 265 of them). He had to handle a number of fragments to complete many of the reconstructions. He also mentions completing two interior views of the Domestic Quarters of the Palace of Nestor, as well as the facade of the Central Court for the museum. He mentions Blegen's plans to dig at the palace starting in June, plans to come out in July, work for Oscar for a month, and then return to Pylos when they are ready for him.

Subject Letter from Blegen to de Jong describing plans

Keywords Piet de Jong; Carl W. Blegen; Marion Rawson;

Notes Front and back of page both contain writing. Carl W. Blegen mentions plans to depart for Greece on March 2nd and to be in Athens by April 14th. He says that Marion Rawson will be arriving in mid-April, and that he is planning on bringing along Watson Smith, who has experience digging in Arizona and New Mexico where frescoes are well-preserved. Blegen asks about the drawing of the hearth that de Jong has been working on, and asks him to keep ahold of it until somebody can bring it back to the United States for Blegen. Blegen also asks de Jong to take a color picture of it, if possible. There is mention of the Pylos dig receiving a great deal of publicity, including articles in journals and papers in America, as well as the London Daily News. He also makes reference to finding enough work so that de Jong will be able to finance and justify coming out to work, and offers to pay de Jong whenever he wants.

Keywords Carl W. Blegen; Piet de Jong; Libby; Effie;

Notes Piet de Jong describes the process of completing the Palace floor drawing, which he planned initially to do without cutting the sheet, but later considers cutting it because of the size of just 30 of the squares. He wants to go back to work at Pylos, but tells Blegen that it is a financial question and that he can only return if he is guaranteed 3 months of work. As a solution, de Jong suggests that he try to find additional work with Platon and at the Agora. At the same time that he is working on this, he also has a project pending for Wace and Hood--if Blegen can spare him. He's writing to ask about the urgency of the project. He mentions the rate for which he's working, too--1000 dollars for 3 months.

Notes Blegen responds to de Jong's letter to say that he wants de Jong to hold onto the floor drawing until he learns of somebody traveling to America. He also mentions plans for the 1954 summer at Pylos, and says that they have not been definitively settled. Roughly, the plans are for Blegen and Marion Rawson to go to Chora in the end of April and to clean, mend, and study the frescoes and the pottery before digging commences. Blegen mentions that if the frescoes are worth recording in watercolor, they will have work for de Jong. That decision will be made in mid-May. Blegen plans to recruit Watson Smith to clean the frescoes. He says that they will do what they can to make it possible for de Jong to return. There's also the possibility of recruiting de Jong to do the exact plan of the palace, as a revision to Theocharis's 1952-1953 provisional plan.

Rawson communicates her and Blegen's wish that the footage not be included, on the grounds that even if "20,000 laymen wouldn't know the difference," they would not be promoting the proper education of the American public on the topic of archaeology-- and that is one of their priorities. Notes Three pages, stapled: letter of recommendation, request for recommendation from Carl W. Blegen, and summary of proposed research. From the attached letter from Graham to Blegen, we learn that he is applying to examine Bronze Age palaces from Crete and mainland Greece, also incorporating evidence from Near Eastern palaces as well. That the American Philosophical Society could have been interested in funding this project is interesting on its own.

Notes from the small finds pottery of excavations of Troy VIIa and Troy VIIb, which appear to have been taken for personal use rather than as a notebook that others could go back and consult. These notes are assumed to have been taken after excavations, and while Troy VIIa was being prepared for publication, because they do not appear to have come from field notebooks, but in some cases appear on departmental paper and on paper of various styles and sizes. Many of the pages contain writing on their reverse side as well. Although these pages are not bound, they have been grouped together because they are unintelligible apart.

The contents include: annotated schematic drawings, descriptions of ceramic finds from various areas of excavation (including some of the houses), photo logs, descriptions of iconography and motifs from sherds, and descriptions of the contents of numerous lots of pottery by the categories "Gray Minyan Ware, Tan Ware, and Painted Ware.

Notes These photographs are assumed to have been sent to Blegen from Caskey on the basis of the envelope, which has Caskey's address crossed off, and which is readdressed to Blegen at 9 Ploutarchou street by hand delivery (no other directives given); consequently, it was probably sent while Caskey was serving as Head of the American School of Classical Studies at Athens. The given date for the photographs is based upon the numbering system that they are given, which is designated by a letter, followed by a number that corresponds to the last two digits of the year in which the photo was taken. The photographs, of which there are 29 total sheets (some with multiple entries) belong to the "T" and "K" series (i. e., those are the letters that head their descriptive code). Some of them are working shots, while others are posed shots that probably went into catalogues for Troy. The pottery and fortifications photographed appear to correspond to the Mycenaean period.

The envelope that contained these photographs was labeled, in pencil (presumably by Blegen): "Photographs - Troy".

Some of the labels on the drawings match those on the lists. Two of the three lists are labeled "boxes looked at" and contain the dates 1939 and 1948. It is also assumed that because the folder is labeled "1951," that it refers to pottery examined in May of 1951, and consequently these lists also may refer to pottery from 1938 [see folder number 397 for details]. On the back of the photograph sheets, there are labels for the contexts from which the pottery has come. In addition, there are invoices (3 total) that appear to give the total cost of transporting sherds from Çanakkale to Istanbul.

Notes Blegen responds to Ingram's request for a reconstruction of the Palace of Nestor, explaining that there are not yet enough data to provide one. He does, however reference a ground plan showing what has been uncovered during the 1952 and 1953 seasons. There is also a description of the Megaron enclosed, which goes into considerable detail (Blegen states reservations).

Subject Exchange between The Illustrated London

Keywords Picard; Lily; Orlands; Myrus; Keramopoulos;

Notes Ingram writes to Blegen on a referral from Alan Wace. The terms of the article--1200-1700 words and 20-30 photographs from which the production team would choose, two seasons in one article--are discussed. Blegen's response (a handwritten draft, attached) inquires about their desired scope and about the deadline for the article.

On the back of the Blegen response, there is another note addressed to "Lily" that asks three questions on an unrelated matter to the ILN article, that of "nominees." He agrees that Picard and Orlands are nominated, he is content with the nominees, and he suggests for the two remaining nominees that Myrus, Keramopoulos, and Weichert be nominated. The date of the note is October 24, 1953.

Subject Letter informing Blegen of some of Chadwick's

Keywords Michael Ventris; John Chadwick; Carl W.

Notes Chadwick relates that there seem to be two principal dieties at Pylos: Poseidon and "Potnia." He also discusses some of the offerings that deities receive, along with priestly figures whose roles also appear in the tablets. Chadwick notes that it has been difficult to get in touch with Bennett about his interpretations, and asks Blegen if he would be willing to release the tablets confidentially to Chadwick or to Palmer for purposes of discussion at the London Seminar. Finally, Chadwick proposes coming out to Greece during the summer of 1957 to explore areas around Pylos

Keywords Carl W. Blegen; Marion Rawson; Dorothy

Notes Series of letters [17 total] containing questions, comments, and progress of the publication of the terracottas from Troy. Thompson begins working on the terracottas in 1952, and eventually asks Blegen for a deferral for publication until after she has completed work on the Agora terracottas, of which the stratigraphy and chronology is more secure and will offer, she feels, some fixed points from which she can make stylistic observations about the Troy material. Her letters ask numerous questions about the material that she has been given, including information about their context, their significance, and about how they ought to be depicted and commented upon.

In exchanges from 1956, Dorothy mentions business that she has with the Archaeological Institute of America, and asks that Blegen accept a nomination for president. He refuses the nomination on the grounds of the time commitment that it would require from him, but suggests instead Clark Hopkins.

Notes Series of letters [20 total] and postcards from Blegen to Bennett regarding the publication of the Linear B tablets from Pylos. Blegen is trying to push Bennett to publish the tablets as quickly as possible, so that they are available to the scholarly community for study. Bennett, however, is in need of more time to complete the project and consequently the publication is dragging. This is cause for consternation on Blegen's part, because a publication entitled Documents in Mycenaean Greek is underway by John Chadwick and Michael Ventris, and is slated for press as early as 1956/7. Folder 532 contains a letter from Chadwick asking Blegen to provide some information about the tablets as a follow up to his examination of the tablets earlier that year.

In his correspondence to Blegen, Bennett mentions the possibility of publishing the tablets with minimal commentary and a series of photographs depicting the scripts depicted therein. Blegen is in full support of this idea. The questions and comments that Bennett communicates in his letters suggest that he is attempting to work on the tablets while addressing other commitments. Notes The contents of this folder are responses to the proofs of an article entitled "La stratigraphie et la chronologie des principaux sites du bronze jusqu'ici explorés en Asia Mineure.

Schaeffer's proofs [assumed to be his because they are in French] include text [23 pages] and maps [three total], all edited in Rawson's hand. There are also two pages comprising a lengthy footnote that details reasons that Schaeffer's reinterpretation of the chronology of Troy is based on fallacious evidence. Schaeffer's argument hinges on the fact that Schliemann's original interpretation of the layers of the tell was correct, which, Blegen and Rawson argue, was not the case. In light of Blegen et al's later reinterpretation of the stratigraphy of the site, Schaeffer's chronology would be tied incorrectly into his other sites in Asia Minor.

The purpose of these hand-edited versions is unknown; they are probably employed in the formulation of the footnote [2 pages, 1 handwritten and 1 typed] also included within this folder. The destination for which the footnote is intended,

Notes These letters [10 total] describe content to be included within Hesperia. From his first letter to Shoe, which describes a dull article about a grave in the Athenian Agora, it is evident that Blegen has a hand in the content of Hesperia publications.

In the exchange concerning the publication of the early tholos tomb, Blegen notes [October 27, 1953] that the tomb was originally discovered by K. Kouronniotes in 1926, but that it was never published. Shoe expresses great interest in a short article, which she receives in November. The article is set to run for winter.

In a second exchange, Blegen and Morgan are invited to write a tribute to accompany an issue of Hesperia to be dedicated to Bert Hodge Hill on the occasion of his 80th birthday. A typescript [3 pages] of the tribute is included within this folder.

Wace relates news of discoveries, as well as his perspectives on the dating of the tablets and the chronology of Mycenaean palaces, as a part of an ongoing dialogue in which he and Blegen engaged while they excavated.

According to their correspondence, Wace and Blegen regularly exchange writings about their excavations and for more formal conferences and publications. They share news from other excavations [e.g., Wace's inclusion of a letter from Jacovides [2 pages] concerning ongoing excavations at Perati. They appear to collaborate a great deal in drawing conclusions about their excavations.

Blegen states at the end of the work that he intends to proceed with a document that describes the discoveries of the excavations and the conclusions reached as a result, but that since he has already gone on for an hour [presumably these documents were read aloud at Literary Club sessions], he will truncate his account for the present time.

Notes This paper suggests that communication between different parts of Anatolia (specifically central and western) by land were probably difficult due to the complex landscape of the peninsula. However, the more likely solution to this problem was solved via the use of sea routes located along the peninsula. Blegen suggests that this route also would have served as a thoroughfare of interactions between Anatolia and the west (including early Greece) throughout the Bronze Age.

Notes The letters from this folder are exchanges concerning chemical analysis of bronze samples from Troy. The following events emerge from this correspondence:

In 1938, Blegen submitted samples of bronze from Troy to Dr. Cecil Desch of the National Physical Laboratory, under the auspices of the British Association for the Development of Sciences. The bronzes were subsequently mentioned in the Eighth Report on Sumerian Copper presented at Cambridge [in this folder, 3 documents, 7 pages total], but without any official results. Based on the letters in this collection, it appears that although Blegen repeatedly wrote to Desch following World War II in an attempt to receive information about the sample, Desch was unable to provide him with any data because he had already retired and had allegedly gone mad [see Rawson to Carothers 1956, included in this folder].

A list of the samples that were originally collected is included in one of the letters [Jaffee to Blegen, January 11, 1957], along with a collection of tags that appear to

It would appear to be a description of individuals who worked on different aspects of the dig, or perhaps locations that were explored while those individuals were present or participating. From the way that the manuscripts within this folder are clipped, there appear to be only two different papers that Blegen actually read when he visited the University of London. However, There is a numbering system for the documents that would correspond to three total lectures being given, as suggested by Blegen's dialogue with V. Gordon Childe in folder 500. Whether there were two lectures or three total, there are draft versions [30 pages], typed and revised versions [2 extras of each presentation, edited by Marion Rawson, according to handwriting] and final as-read versions [1 labeled as such] of at least one of the talks . One of the papers appears to have been a survey of Neolithic through Late Bronze Age culture in Greece [22 pages,] and the other [23 pages] which seems to have covered Neolithic and Early Helladic pottery.

Keywords Carl W. Blegen; William T. Semple; Louise Taft

Notes Blegen describes the wrapping up of excavations at Troy in 1932. He mentions competition with the French to obtain permits for digging at sites near Troy, and describes a sense of satisfaction that the dig quarters have been built and that excavations have gotten off to a good start. He also commends Semple on his and Louise's decision to back digging at Troy, and mentions how wonderful both of them are to work with.
