419 is a cas désespéré for the attribution to dies. Note that some 40 per cent of the examples have been listed as unattributed (Die X); further, that 7 of the 18 illustrated dies (B, C, F, G, K, P, R) are represented by a single example each. It must also be stated that for the other dies, the unillustrated examples are often not certain duplicates of those illustrated. In particular, the examples listed as of Die J, though they seem to be interrelated, are certainly coming one takes into account variations in setting or wear not all impressions of the same state of a single die. Attribution is ~~made~~ particularly hard in the case of dies in which the upsilon is like a Roman V rather than Y, e.g. Dies E, F, J; even complete impressions of these have no right way up, so the problem of attribution is doubled. The same is of course true of the many impressions that are incomplete, having taken only the middle ^{three letters} of the die. The dies themselves seem to have been made frequently and casually. We have made reasonable efforts to define and present the assortment known to us.

Note context of the second quarter of the 1st century B.C. for SS 14252 from

+ 1
Agora ~~inscriptions~~ well E 18 : 3. About the same date is suggested by the presence of four Koan handles with this name in a loose but quite consistent context in Alexandria (discussed ^{Delos} 27, under E 16/).

handle

The quantity of known stamped handles of AOXOZ (examples of 417 and 418 as well as 419), considered against a background ^{of} the many Koan jars of their day that were not stamped, must indicate relative prosperity for their maker, and perhaps contributed to it. Psychologists call attention to markings, natural or intentional, that suggest a stare. "A direct stare is typical of the most out-and-out aggression. . . . Because of their powerful intimidating effect, many species have evolved staring eye-spots as self-defence mechanisms. . . . In our own species, commercial products have sometimes used the same device (perhaps knowingly, perhaps not)." The author ~~speaks~~ of the "threat-faces" designed for automobiles. motor-cars. v "On a smaller scale certain products have been given threat-face brand names, such as OKO, OMO, OZO, and OVO. Fortunately for the manufacturers, these do not repel customers: on the contrary, they catch the eye and, having caught it, reveal themselves to be no more than harmless cardboard boxes. But the impact has already been drawn to that product rather than to its rivals."

Staerman (p. 39, no. 116, see also in fig. 5) assigned a non-double handle with stamp reading MENEAAOY to Kos. However, the genitive form of this name is otherwise known to us not on Koan handles, single or double, but on thick handles like those of certain ^{early} Roman jars, four so stamped having been found in Delos (TD 2300, 2361, 2362, and 4196).

to 444

Repetition of a type on the second rib of the handle occurs in other cases, cf. Pl. 1, 4 B, Pl. 4, 28 A, Pl. 10, 114, etc. But these are odd examples in normal series the rest of which are stamped on one rib only. The die of 444 does not match any of those of 443 with which it might otherwise have been listed as an odd example. Instead, it is probably the same as the name stamp of 445 F. 444 exists in two examples, i.e. we have two handles on each of which the same name stamp has been repeated in the same way. The separate type number seemed therefore justified.
